Session Spotlight : Climate-Smart Agriculture & Regenerative Bio-Economy Solutions

"The future of sustainability lies not outside agriculture, but within it."

Agriculture is emerging as a central pillar in addressing climate change, offering scalable, science-driven solutions that balance environmental sustainability with economic growth. This session will explore how climate-smart farming systems and bio-based value chains can drive the transition towards a resilient, low-carbon future.

- Agriculture as a Carbon Solution – Enhancing carbon sequestration through improved cropping systems, agroforestry, and regenerative practices, contributing to climate resilience and carbon markets.
- Sustainable Crop Systems & Resource Efficiency – Advancing soil health, water-use efficiency, and climate-resilient agriculture through better seeds, inputs, and farm practices.
- Bio-Economy & Green Industrial Linkages – Utilizing agricultural biomass, with bamboo as a key high-growth, fast-renewing resource with strong industrial and carbon potential, along with other agri-residues, for biofuels, biodegradable materials, and sustainable industrial applications.
- Diversification & Farmer Livelihoods – Promoting alternative crops and value chains to enhance farmer incomes, restore degraded lands, and support rural economies.
- Market Linkages & Scalable Value Chains – Strengthening farm-to-market integration, traceability, and sustainable sourcing to unlock premium markets, industry partnerships, and long-term value creation.

Bringing together leaders from agriculture, industry, policy, and finance, this session will highlight actionable pathways to position India at the forefront of climate-smart agriculture and regenerative bio-economy development, unlocking cross-sectoral opportunities and scalable impact.
